METAL THEFT

Six historic churches in the Diocese of York have been hit by lead thieves in the last month, five of them suffering very serious damage.

A recent sharp increase in scrap metal values on world markets has emboldened criminals to steal the lead sheeting that covers many ancient church roofs.

The Diocese is sometimes able to offer help to local parochial church councils (PCCs) to contribute to the cost of installing monitored alarm systems to protect vulnerable roofs.

Installation of an alarm significantly reduces the threat of lead theft, but may also result in a more substantial insurance settlement if the worst happens.
